1. Policy Statement and College Values

Colchester Institute is committed to creating and sustaining a positive and supportive working environment for our staff, agency workers, contractors, and volunteers and an excellent teaching and learning experience for our students and apprentices, where staff and students are equally valued and respected, and encouraged to thrive. As a provider of employment and education, we value the diversity of our staff, apprentices and students. We are committed to providing a fair, equitable and mutually supportive learning and working environment for all.

This policy deals with the promotion of equity, diversity and inclusion for all at Colchester Institute (which includes University Centre Colchester) in accordance with the Equality Act 2010 and in line with the Public Sector General and Specific Duties.

Our goal is to ensure that these commitments are reinforced by our Values and are embedded in our day-to-day working practices with all our students, colleagues, customers and other stakeholders.

We will not tolerate any form of discrimination based on Age, Disability, Gender Reassignment, Marriage and Civil Partnership, Pregnancy and Maternity, Race, Religion or Belief, Sex, Sexual Orientation, or any other grounds.

We will demonstrate our commitment by:

- promoting equality of opportunity and diversity within the College and the communities in which we work and with all of our staff, students and other stakeholders;
- building a workforce which reflects our community, with the aim of having parity of representation across the organisation;
- treating our students, colleagues and visitors fairly, equitably and with respect;
- promoting an environment free from discrimination, bullying and harassment, including but not limited to sexual harassment, and consistently, swiftly and robustly tackling behaviour which breaches this, using approved College procedures;
- recognising and valuing the differences and individual contributions that a diversity College community can make;
- building in relevant legislative requirements and best practice to all our service delivery and employee policies and procedures, and supporting these with appropriate training and guidance.

Additionally, in 2025, the College signed up to the Association of Colleges EDI Charter and have outlined in a statement on the College's website the ways in which we strive to meet the commitments of that Charter. The signed Charter can be found in Appendix 3.

Every person working for the College has a personal responsibility for implementing and promoting these principles in their day-to-day dealings with others.

To this end, the College acknowledges the following basic rights for all staff, students and members of their community:

- to be treated with dignity and respect;
- to be treated fairly at work, in learning or when otherwise using our services;
- to receive encouragement to reach their full potential.

The College's values (below) are fully reflective of this policy and our commitment to EDI:

- We are an INCLUSIVE College, welcoming employees and learners of all backgrounds, ages and abilities;
- We are COLLABORATIVE, working in partnership internally and externally to achieve shared goals;
- We are RESPECTFUL of each other in our words, actions and behaviours;
- We are AMBITIOUS for our learners, our staff and our College, always striving for excellence;
- We are HONEST and open, and act with integrity in all that we do;
- We provide a physically and emotionally SAFE environment, where people can be themselves, try out ideas and thrive.

2. Objectives and Legislative Context

Colchester Institute Corporation, has overall responsibility for ensuring that the College complies with the requirements of the Equality Act 2010, including the general duty to have due regard to:

- Eliminate unlawful discrimination, harassment and victimisation and other conduct prohibited by the Act;
- Advance equality of opportunity between people who share a protected characteristic* and those who do not;
- Foster good relations between people who share a protected characteristic and those who do not.

The Equality Act focusses on nine protected characteristics* which are:

- Age
- Disability
- Gender Reassignment
- Marriage and Civil Partnership
- Pregnancy and Maternity
- Race including colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin.
- Religion or Belief
- Sex
- Sexual Orientation

Further information and detail about each of the Protected Characteristics in Appendix 1 below.

Under the Equality Act, it is unlawful to:

- discriminate directly against anyone and treat them less favourably than others on the grounds of the protected characteristics (or on the grounds of a perception that an individual holds a particular characteristic even if they do not). In the case of disability this includes failure to make reasonable adjustments.
- discriminate against someone for reasons relating to their association with a person on the grounds of the protected characteristics, for example discriminating against an employee/student because they have a disabled dependent.
- discriminate indirectly against anyone by applying a criterion, provision or practice which disadvantages people with a protected characteristic unless the person applying the provision can justify it as a proportionate means of achieving a legitimate aim.
- subject someone to harassment. Harassment is unwanted conduct related to a protected characteristic which impacts an individual's dignity or creates an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment. Harassment may be persistent or an isolated incident and may be by an individual against an individual or involve groups of people. This includes behaviour that an individual finds offensive on these grounds even if the behaviour is not directed at the individual.
- treat a person less favourably because they either submit to, or reject, sexual harassment or harassment related to their sex.
- victimise someone because they have made, or intend to make, a complaint or allegation or has given or intends to give evidence in relation to a complaint of discrimination in line with the Equality Act.

In October 2024, a new duty under the Equality Act 2010, requires employers to take reasonable steps to prevent sexual harassment of their employees. Employers must take reasonable preventative steps against sexual harassment, encourage cultural change where necessary and reduce the likelihood of sexual harassment occurring. In response to this the College has expanded its Dignity at Work Policy to embrace all aspects of the new duty. All members of the College Leadership and Management Group are trained in Sexual Harassment and are responsible for ensuring that all staff within their Department have received training on this subject.

As a provider of Higher Education, Colchester Institute is also required (since Summer 2025) to publish comprehensive information on how we are preventing harassment and sexual misconduct, how incidents can be reported, what students can expect, and how they will be supported, in any investigations.

3. Roles and Responsibilities

Colchester Institute will not tolerate behaviour in the form of discrimination, victimisation, harassment or bullying.

The legislation and associated regulations described in section 2 above exist to protect employees, and there are a number of policies and procedures in place to support the legislation.

- To support regular meetings of the EDI Steering Group and to carry out surveys of staff as appropriate to inform the EDI action plan and progress against this.

4. Definition of Key Terms

Equality is about fairness. It is achieved when individuals or groups of people are not treated less favourably, and where everyone can participate and have the same opportunity to fulfil their potential.

Equity is about recognising that each person has different circumstances and allocating the appropriate resources, support and opportunities needed to reach an equal outcome. Unlike equality, equity takes into account that people come from different starting points.

Diversity is about recognising and respecting the value of difference. It means considering and appreciating all the unique characteristics that make people who they are. This includes, but is not limited to, national origins, language, race or ethnicity, disability, sex, age, religion or belief, sexual orientation, gender identity, socio-economic status, and family structure. Diversity also includes diversity of thought and life experiences.

Inclusion is about creating and maintaining a culture where people feel welcomed, respected, and valued for who they are as an individual or groups.

Other definitions

Other key EDI terms, language and concepts are listed and defined in Appendix 2, below. Staff should be familiar with these and EDI training will cover this knowledge.

5. The Benefits of a Diverse Workforce

A diverse workforce can offer a wide range of resources, skills, ideas and energy to the College, supporting excellence in all we do.

Diversity management can benefit the College in a number of ways, e.g.

- Having a more representative 'balanced' workforce;
- Utilising the wider knowledge and experiences of people with different backgrounds and experiences to provide different perspectives, ideas, approaches and solutions;
- Reflecting our diverse applicant and student body, providing inspiration, empathy and support to students of all backgrounds;
- Valuing and respecting employees as individuals, attracting, retaining and promoting from a wider talent pool.

6. Student Personal Development

As part of the Personal Development curriculum, all students and apprentices receive education and training in the principles of Equality and Diversity. The aim is to help all students to develop an understanding of the importance of Equity, Diversity and Inclusion, not only as it applies in the workplace, but also in life. This may come under the banner of British Values (which include 'tolerance' and 'respect') and be part of the delivery of the main qualification or apprenticeship. Apprentices follow the 'Side by Side' training package which includes EDI development.

7. Staff and Governor Training and CPD

In support of this policy, and our drive to be an Inclusive College, EDI training is provided to staff. The aim is to raise knowledge of equality legislation, develop EDI knowledge and competencies and tackle discriminatory practice and behaviour.

All staff and governors will attend a Mandatory online training on 'Responding to Sexual Violence and Harassment' and one 'Inclusion Essentials' e-learning training as part of the package of essential CPD on joining the organisation. Other online and face-to-face training will take place from time to time as part of the College's annual Professional Development plan. This is likely to be based around the Education and Training Foundation's Deeper Thinking and Stronger Action Toolkit.

Additionally, relevant staff, including all UCC staff will receive training in line with the new OfS condition of registration regarding prevention of sexual harassment.

8. Monitoring

All College Policies will be impact assessed using the standard impact assessment tool to ensure fair and equitable treatment of all individuals and groups. Through the EDI Steering Group, Student Representative bodies, staff and student surveys and other means, the College consults staff, students and stakeholders to ensure that its EDI Policy reflects best practice and is the 'lived experience' of the College community.

As part of the annual self-assessment process, leaders and managers carry out an analysis of 'achievement gaps'. This is a close look at the performance of students with particular characteristics against overall College performance or against students without those characteristics. Analysis will be carried out to compare, for example male/female qualification outcomes, or those for students declaring learning difficulties or disabilities compared with others. Actions will be put in place through Quality Improvement Plans to reduce achievement gaps giving all students maximum opportunity to succeed on their programmes.

All of the above is reported in the College's Annual EDI Report where the College will record its annual EDI Objectives and Action Plans. This Report is approved by Governors and published on the College's website.

9. Sources of Help and Information

Colchester Institute wants individuals to feel empowered to raise any issues of concern in relation to this policy.

There are a number of options available to staff who wish to seek advice on any aspect of this policy. These include the Line Manager; the People and Culture Team, Union Representatives and other colleagues.

10. Raising Concerns Regarding Breach of this Policy

Colchester Institute encourages staff, students and other stakeholders to report all types of potential discrimination, as this assists us in ensuring that diversity, equity and inclusion principles are adhered to. Staff should report concerns to their line manager or the People and Culture team. Students should report concerns to their Course Leader, their Progress and Destination Tutor or a member of Student Services. Visitors and other stakeholders should use the College complaints procedure.

Any breach will be investigated and where appropriate will be considered under the relevant disciplinary procedure for staff or students, or the Workplace Resolution or Grievance procedures as appropriate.

Staff who make complaints or who participate in good faith in an investigation will not suffer any form of retaliation or victimisation as a result. Anyone retaliating against or victimising someone in this way will be subject to disciplinary action.

Making an allegation of harassment or bullying in bad faith or which is known to be untrue is misconduct and will be dealt with under our Disciplinary Procedure.

Appendix 1 - Protected Characteristics – Further Information

Age

The Act protects people of all ages. However, different treatment because of age is not unlawful direct or indirect discrimination if you can justify it, i.e. if you can demonstrate that it is a proportionate means of meeting a legitimate aim. Age is the only protected characteristic that allows employers to justify direct discrimination.

Disability

Under the Act, a person is disabled if they have a physical or mental impairment which has a substantial and long- term adverse effect on their ability to carry out normal day-to-day activities, which would include things like using a telephone, reading a book or using public transport.

The Act puts a duty on the College to make reasonable adjustments to help staff overcome disadvantage resulting from an impairment (eg by providing assistive technologies to help visually impaired staff use computers effectively).

The Act includes protection from discrimination arising from disability. This states that it is discriminatory to treat a disabled person unfavourably because of something connected with their disability (eg a tendency to make spelling mistakes arising from dyslexia). This type of discrimination is unlawful where the employer or other person acting for the employer knows, or could reasonably be expected to know, that the person has a disability. This type of discrimination is only justifiable if an employer can show that it is a proportionate means of achieving a legitimate aim.

Additionally, indirect discrimination covers disabled people. This means that a job applicant or employee could claim that a particular rule or requirement you have in place disadvantages people with the same disability. Unless you could justify this, it would be unlawful.

The Act also makes it unlawful, except in certain circumstances, for employers to ask about a candidate's health before offering them work.

Gender reassignment

The Act provides protection for trans people. A trans person is someone who proposes to, starts or has completed a process to change their gender. The Act does not require a person to be under medical supervision to be protected.

It is discrimination to treat trans people less favourably for being absent from work because they propose to undergo, are undergoing or have undergone gender reassignment than they would be treated if they were absent because they were ill or injured.

Marriage and civil partnership

The Act protects employees who are married or in a civil partnership against discrimination. Single people are not protected.

Pregnancy and maternity

A woman is protected against discrimination on the grounds of pregnancy and maternity during the period of her pregnancy and any statutory maternity leave to which she is entitled. During this period, pregnancy and maternity discrimination cannot be treated as sex discrimination. The College must not take into account an employee's period of absence due to pregnancy-related illness when making a decision about employment.

Race

For the purposes of the Act 'race' includes colour, nationality and ethnic or national origins.

Religion or belief

In the Equality Act, religion includes any religion. It also includes a lack of religion, in other words employees or jobseekers are protected if they do not follow a certain religion or have no religion at all. Additionally, a religion must have a clear structure and belief system. Belief means any religious or philosophical belief or a lack of such belief. To be protected, a belief must satisfy various criteria, including that it is a weighty and substantial aspect of human life and behaviour. Denominations or sects within a religion can be considered a protected religion or religious belief.

Discrimination because of religion or belief can occur even where both the discriminator and recipient are of the same religion or belief.

Sex

Both men and women are protected under the Act. The college additionally recognises non-binary people as protected.

Sexual orientation

The Act protects bisexual, gay, heterosexual and lesbian people.

Appendix 2 - Definitions, Language and Key Concepts

Allyship refers to the actions, behaviours, and practices that people with power and/or privilege can take to support, amplify, and advocate for others who are disempowered. For example, men can be allies to women, straight people to those who are LGBT and white people to black people.

Cultural capital refers to the skills, education, intellect and experience that individuals acquire as assets. Traditionally this has been used to exclude people if they didn't speak or look like those in positions of power, or if they didn't go to the 'right school' or live in the 'right place'. However, if we want to promote diversity and inclusion then we need to see diversity of cultural capital as positive and see difference as an asset.

Enabling is when a person's negative behaviour is able to continue due to the complicit behaviour of those around them, such as passing off behaviours with comments such as 'boys will be boys' or 'it's just a bit of banter'.

Gas lighting refers to convincing someone that they are wrong or mistaken about something even when they are not. If done repeatedly, the person subject to this can start to doubt themselves or their memory of events. In the context of EDI, the term is often used when people are told that their experiences of prejudice or discrimination are 'all in their own mind' or that they are 'blowing things out of proportion'.

Intersectionality – When we consider equity, it's important to note that our identities are intersectional. In other words, the individual protected characteristics we hold, such as race, sex, and sexuality, overlap and cannot be considered in isolation. Intersectionality acknowledges we can simultaneously belong to multiple historically-marginalised groups and that exclusion does not affect all groups of people in equal measure. People who hold several, intersecting protected characteristics can be particularly affected by prejudice and discrimination. The term intersectionality was first used by Professor Kimberlé Crenshaw to describe how black women were doubly discriminated against, because of their gender, and because of their race.

Microaggressions are comments or actions that subtly and often unconsciously or unintentionally express a prejudiced attitude toward a member of particular groups (such as trans people, people with disabilities, or people from ethnic minority backgrounds).

Ordinary privilege – Ordinary, everyday privilege is not about what you have, it's about what you don't have to put up with. It's about the systemic inequalities that give some people privilege and make life harder for others. Privilege is the absence of the negative consequence of bias and prejudice. It can operate in such a way that people with privilege rarely notice the advantages they have and the challenges they do not have to face. Privilege presents itself as the norm, the everyday, and so for those of us with privilege it can be hard to see that life is not the same for some people as it is for us.

Positive Action is the deliberate introduction of measures to eliminate or reduce discrimination, or its effects. It is not about special treatment for a particular group, but the fair treatment of all people. It is distinct from positive discrimination which is unlawful.

Rape culture is an environment where sexual violence and abuse is normalised, played down or laughed off. This may include actions from banter, name calling, inappropriate touching, upskirting, and cyber-flashing to sexual coercion and violence.

Stereotyping is defined as a standardised mental picture that one person or group of people holds in common about another person or group of people and can be either positive or negative.

Toxic masculinity refers to harmful forms of masculinity such as the use dominance, violence and control to assert power and superiority over others. Adherence to traditional male gender roles can stigmatise and limit the emotions boys and men can comfortably express while elevating other emotions such as anger.

Unconscious bias (also known as implicit bias) is a term used to describe our innate preferences for people and groups who look like us, who think like us and who come from similar backgrounds to us. As humans, we all have unconscious biases, which can cause us to inadvertently become less inclusive of individual people, or groups of people, who seem different to us. Recognising and understanding our unconscious bias is very important, as this is the first step to challenging it.

Upstander – Someone who sees a wrong-doing or inequity and speaks out or acts in support of an individual or cause. It may be something simple such as challenging a comment, naming a problem and taking responsibility for tackling it, or offering your support to a person/people affected. Alternatively, being a bystander and not acting when witnessing wrong-doing can result in 'bystander apathy'. This occurs when someone is not willing to interfere simply because other people are present.

White fragility refers to the discomfort and defensiveness white people experience when talking about and confronted with racism.

Colleges are centres where students belong.

This is our public statement of commitment to providing equity and creating an inclusive culture in which all our staff, learners and communities can thrive.

We recognise that:

- it is socially, morally and economically right to prepare our learners for life and work in a world that is diverse.
- equity and inclusion are fundamental if we are to make the most of our diversity.
- we will be judged by our actions and the impact of those actions.

We commit to:

- ensuring equity and inclusion are reflected in our curriculum.
- putting diversity and inclusion at the heart of our employment policies and practices.
- listening to, and reflecting on our obligations to, the communities we serve.
- encouraging those with whom we contract to support our commitments.

We will lead by example, tracking our impact by:

- setting organisational and individual objectives monitored by the board.
